

Grocery Price Problem Statement

Author: Shawn Bolin

While many blog sites exist to compare grocery prices from various stores, none compare them in real time, nor do they compare current prices to those in the past. While many blog sites exist to compare grocery prices from various stores, none compare them in real time, nor do they compare current prices to those in the past. Consumers and budget-conscious shoppers face this issue, struggling to find the most cost-effective options without up-to-date information. This problem manifests as an inability to make informed purchasing decisions based on the latest price changes and historical trends. It matters because real-time price comparisons can help consumers save money and make smarter shopping choices.